

Call for Submissions...

Introduction & Background

The Planning Institute of British Columbia (PIBC) annually recognizes the professional work and individual accomplishments of members across British Columbia and the Yukon through its awards and recognition programs. The PIBC Awards & Recognition Committee has developed the various awards categories to reflect the diverse range of excellent planning work undertaken across British Columbia and the Yukon.

PIBC welcomes and encourages submissions for the...

Awards for Excellence in Planning – (5 categories)

Please review the information below carefully and utilize the appropriate online form to make a submission under one of these award categories.

Awards for Excellence in Planning

These awards honour the best in professional planning work – policies, plans, projects, research etc. – undertaken by members in communities and regions across British Columbia and the Yukon in five categories.

Categories

PIBC wishes to encourage online nominations / submissions for excellence in planning in any one of the following five categories:

Research & New Directions in Planning

The Research & New Directions category includes original studies, reports, or papers that show thorough examination of a planning issue, policy or practice using analytical methods that support original findings that are of value to the profession. Submissions in this category may include investigations on a wide variety of planning topics from a local, regional, national or global perspective. Submissions should include a description of the research methodology, key findings and how the results are of importance to the profession.

Excellence in Policy Planning*

Small Town & Rural Areas, OR City & Urban Areas

The Excellence in Policy Planning categories seeks to honour the development of leading-edge planning policy. Submissions should include examples of effective initiatives and solutions that enhance the social, economic, environmental and cultural wellbeing of communities. The areas of excellence may be in environmental planning, social planning, transportation planning, climate change, and public consultation to name a few. Small town and rural area submissions, or city and urban area submissions, in this category could include Official Community Plans, regional plans, impact analyses or strategic plans.

NOTE: Small town and rural areas are typically those with a population under 80,000, or outside a larger urban center or metropolitan area, whereas city and urban areas are typically those with a population of 80,000 or above, or within a larger urban center or metropolitan area. Submitters should identify the size of the population in the community/region for which the plan or policy initiative was developed as part of their submission.

Excellence in Planning Practice*

Small Town & Rural Areas, OR City & Urban Areas

The Excellence in Planning Practice categories recognize the efforts of planners to turn policy into reality, whether it is crafting a new urban space, protecting the industrial land base, using community partnerships to secure funding for much needed projects, engaging the public with creative approaches or new directions in project management. Submissions in this category should highlight the inventive ways that planners are creating transformative change through groundbreaking actions. Small town and rural area submissions, or city and urban area submissions, in this category could include design guidelines, zoning by-laws, development permit guidelines and regulatory requirements, prohibitions and limitations consistent with and illustrating the direct implementation of official community plans, park plans, and other planning policy endorsed by Council or the Regional Board.

NOTE: Small town and rural areas are typically those with a population under 80,000, or outside a larger urban center or metropolitan area, whereas city and urban areas are typically those with a population of 80,000 or above, or within a larger urban center or metropolitan area. Submitters should identify the size of the population in the community/region for which the plan or policy initiative was developed as part of their submission.

These categories are reviewed each year by the Awards & Recognition Committee to ensure their relevance to current planning practice. On an annual basis the Committee may amend existing categories or develop new categories accordingly.

Awards for Planning Excellence – Evaluation Criteria:

These criteria apply to all submissions, but will receive different weighting depending on the submission/category.

- Innovation – Brings forward a new approach that has not yet been seen; and provides an original take on existing practice.
- Transferability – Principles can be applied to many diverse planning scenarios and at several scales; offers ways in which it could be transferred to other locales, scopes, and regulatory or legislative structures; and can be used by different elements of planning practice (e.g.: social planning, development planning, etc.).

- Contribution to the profession – Contributes to improving the standards of practice for the profession as a whole; brings attention and awareness of the Planning profession to new audiences; and evidences significant collaboration between planning and other disciplines.
- Public process – Engages stakeholders and/or the general public in meaningful ways; uses creative and appropriate engagement tools and techniques; and demonstrates the integration of the information gathered from the public process.
- Implementation – Has received the approval of relevant decision-making bodies (Council, Board, community group, etc.); and has a clear, thorough, and effective implementation strategy, including elements such as monitoring and evaluation, where applicable.
- Sustainability – Demonstrates a deliberate integration of all aspects of sustainability (economic, cultural, social, environmental), as applicable to the scope and breadth of each project; and evidences incorporation of sustainability in original ways.
- Overall presentation – Submission is complete and summary is within page limitation; is well organized and ideas are clearly articulated; and the combination of text and graphics is appropriate, reasoned and organized in a clear manner.

NOTE: For the category, Research & New Directions in Planning, Research dissemination and Research methods will be additional criteria against which project submissions will be evaluated. Where appropriate, these criteria will be considered in lieu of Implementation and Public process.*

2019 PIBC Awards Program

Jury & Submissions:

Jury: The Awards Jury for all PIBC awards is composed of a Committee of several experienced Institute members, appointed by the PIBC Board of Directors, representing a variety of planning backgrounds from across British Columbia and the Yukon. A Sub-Committee acts as the jury for each type of award.

Jury members cannot evaluate or vote on nominations for projects in which they directly participated or those submitted by the department or firm in which they are currently employed.

The Awards Jury, by unanimous vote, may move a submission from one category to another. A Jury Selection Award may be granted to recognize submissions that reflect excellence in planning without fitting into one of the three nomination categories. The Awards Jury may choose to not present awards or to present more than one award in each category, as deemed appropriate. Complete online nominations / submissions must be received on or before 4:00 pm (Pacific Time) Monday, February 11, 2019.

Submissions: Presentation of awards is based on submissions received. The Awards Jury may choose to not present awards or to present more than one award in each category, as deemed appropriate.
