

Changing Childhood & the Creation of Child Friendly Cities

Valerie Fronczek Memorial Workshop

Dr. Roger Hart is a professor of psychology and geography at the Graduate Center of the City University of New York. He has a broad concern with fulfilling children's rights through finding ways to better understand their lives and their perspectives. With UNICEF he has published books on children's participation, sustainable development with children and the planning of cities.

This workshop is for anyone concerned with the current state of children's play and free time outside of school, including planners, designers, policymakers and educators. Participants will learn about and use an internationally recognized tool to evaluate changes in children's use of free time, the environments made available to them, and the policy and planning responses in B.C. A discussion of why these changes matter will identify strategies and solutions that participants can initiate in their communities.
