Climate Resiliency and Sustainability Panel and Networking Night

In honour of World Town Planning Day, please join us and our panel of speakers for an evening discussion and Q&A on climate resiliency and sustainability.

Chris Osborne, MRTPI, MCIP, RPP, is the Manager of Planning with the District of North Cowichan and is a planning certificate instructor at Vancouver Island University. Chris will be presenting about ecological overshoot and how we can and must move out of an economic growth paradigm if we are to achieve sustainability.

Maggie Baynham, MCIP, RPP, is a Senior Sustainability Planner with the District of Saanich. Maggie will be presenting on Saanich's climate policy and programs, which include ground-breaking projects such as the Province's first Property Assessed Clean Energy (PACE) Financing program and an equity-centered e-bike incentive program.

Courtenay Miller is a candidate student with Vancouver Island University's School of Community Planning program and will be presenting on addressing the downfalls of green infrastructure planning and providing solutions on how it can be used as a tool to make cities more resilient to climate change.

Steve Roddick, M.A., Climate Resilience and Adaptation Specialist at Pinna Consulting is a climate resilience and adaptation specialist, a skilled researcher and analyst, and a strategic thinker who loves tackling complex challenges. Steve will be presenting on how to channel public input in ways that support better climate adaptation planning.

Light appetizers will be provided. Snacks and beverages are available for purchase at the concession stand and bar.
